

Globe Life Rebuttals

"I'm Not Interested" (Early Brush-Off)

Rebuttal: "I completely get that – you're probably getting a ton of calls. I'm not here to sell you anything today, I'm just here to get you the information you already asked for. Takes about 10 minutes. When's a good time to do that?"

NLP: Pacing & leading – match resistance, then redirect.

"I Already Have Insurance"

Rebuttal: "That's great, honestly – that tells me you're the type of person who takes care of their family. Most people I talk to with coverage find there's actually a gap they didn't know about. I'd hate for your family to find that out at the worst possible time. It only takes 10 minutes to confirm you're fully covered. When's the best time we can do that?"

NLP: Reframe + future pacing the pain.

"I Can't Afford It"

Rebuttal: "I hear you – and that's exactly why I want to meet with you. Globe Life has plans starting as low as a few dollars a day. The families who say they can't afford it are usually the ones who need it most. Let's at least look at your options together – you might be surprised. It only takes about 10 minutes. When is the best time we can do that for you?"

NLP: Embedded presupposition – "you might be surprised" plants positive expectation.

"My Spouse Isn't Home / Can't Make It"

Rebuttal: "No worries – I just prefer having both of you there because these decisions tend to go a lot smoother when you're both on the same page. If [spouse] can even pop in for just 5 minutes at the end, that's all I need. Is there a time when you both will be together?"

NLP: Minimizing the ask – "just 5 minutes" lowers resistance.

"Can't You Just Email Me the Info?"

Rebuttal: "I wish I could – but honestly, what I'm sending over has documents that need to be explained. If I just fired it off to your email, it'd look like a bunch of confusing paperwork and you'd probably just ignore it. The virtual call makes everything crystal clear, takes 10 minutes, and I do all the heavy lifting. When's the best time for you?"

NLP: Acknowledge + logical reframe, open-ended scheduling close.

"I Need to Think About It / Talk to My Spouse First"

Rebuttal: "Absolutely – and that's exactly why I want both of you on the call together. That way you can think about it with all the facts right in front of you, rather than one of you trying to explain something you haven't fully seen yet. That's actually more fair to both of you. When is the best time we can schedule that 10-minute session with you both?"

NLP: Agreement frame + logic loop that turns the objection into the reason to show up.

"I'm Too Busy Right Now"

Rebuttal: "Totally understand – that's why I'm being super flexible. I'm not asking for today. I'm asking for literally 10 minutes sometime this week. I can do early morning, late evening, whatever fits your life. What does your schedule look like in the next day or two?"

NLP: Shrink the commitment + open-ended time window keeps options open.

"Is This a Sales Call?"

Rebuttal: "It's more of a review call – I'm not here to pressure you into anything. My job is just to show you what you qualify for based on what you filled out, and you decide what makes sense for your family. It takes about 10 minutes. When is the best time we can do that?"

NLP: Reframe the label, strip the pressure, open-ended close.

Handling Health Crisis (Stroke in Hospital) - Globe Life Script

Goal: Show empathy, position yourself as a helper, pivot to family/spouse immediately.

When they answer (sounds weak/concerned):

Immediate Empathy Pivot:

"Hi [Name], this is [Agent Name] with Globe Life. Oh no – I can hear the concern in your voice. Is everything ok? ... [Let them talk about stroke/hospital] ... I'm so sorry to hear that. How are they doing right now?"

Transition to Value:

"Listen, right now the most important thing is making sure your family has everything taken care of. I can help get your coverage reviewed and updated so there's one less thing for you to worry about during this time. Is there anyone with you right now – spouse, adult child – who could hop on for just a few minutes?"

If spouse/adult child answers:

Script Adaptation:

"Hi, this is [Agent Name] with Globe Life. I was just speaking with [Customer Name] about their policy. I understand they're recovering from a stroke right now – my heart goes out to your family.

The great news is their coverage is still active and we can make sure it's positioned properly during this time. It only takes about 10 minutes. Are you both home together tonight, or when's the best time I can walk you through this?"

"I Didn't Fill Anything Out"

What you said: (pivot to spouse) – Perfect move.

If they push back on spouse too:

"That's totally fair – sometimes these come in through a third party or a shared household. Either way, now that I have you, I just want to make sure you're aware of what's available. It only takes about 10 minutes. When's the best time to go over that?"

NLP: Don't argue the source – accept it and pivot to value immediately.

"I'm Financially Secure / Don't Need It"

This is your strongest objection to flip because wealthy people actually need life insurance more strategically. Here's the full rebuttal flow:

First response:

"That's great to hear – honestly the families I sit down with who are financially secure aren't looking at life insurance the same way most people are. It's less about replacing income and more about protecting what you've already built. Help me ask – when you say financially secure, are you thinking more about protecting assets, or is it more about leaving something behind for your family?"

(Let them answer – this tells you exactly which angle to use.)

If "PROTECTING ASSETS":

"Exactly – that's actually where life insurance becomes a tax strategy more than anything else. A lot of financially secure families use it to protect their estate from being eaten up in taxes and probate. It's worth 10 minutes just to see if there's a gap. When's the best time for that?"

If "leaving something behind":

"Perfect – so you do want to make sure your family is taken care of. The question is just whether what you have in place right now is structured the most efficiently. When's the best time to take 10 minutes and confirm that?"

If "I have plenty of savings":

"That's great – savings covers a lot. The one thing it doesn't cover is the tax hit your family takes when they inherit it, or the time it takes to liquidate assets when someone passes. Life insurance pays out immediately, tax free, with zero probate. When's good to take 10 minutes and see how that fits in?"

Nuclear Option (if they're still resistant):

"I respect that completely. Most people in your position aren't doing this for themselves – they're doing it so their family never has to touch a single dollar of what they've built. When's the best time to make sure that's locked in?"

NLP: Shift from self-protection to legacy protection – financially secure people respond to legacy, not need.

"I Already Have a Policy (But Not in Our System)"

Strongest positioning: You're not competing – you're verifying and enhancing. Common reasons: different carrier, lapsed, outdated records, or system lag.reddit+1

Opening Acknowledgment + Pivot

"That's great – I'm glad to hear you're covered. Just to confirm, is that with Globe Life/American Income, or another carrier?"

(Branch based on answer.)

Branch 1: Different Carrier

Rebuttal: "Perfect – most people have coverage with multiple carriers. Our plans actually stack on top of what you have, filling gaps the other policy doesn't cover. It takes 10 minutes to verify you're fully protected. When's the best time to do that?"

NLP: "Stacking" removes competition, creates completeness.

Follow-up: "What specifically does your current policy cover – term, whole life, final expenses?"

Branch 2: Same Carrier (But Not Showing)

Rebuttal: "Ok, let me pull that up – sometimes there's a system sync delay or address update needed. While I check, can you tell me the policy number or when you set it up? Great, found it. Let's just confirm your information is current and see if anything needs updating. When works best for a quick 10-minute review?"

NLP: Positions you as problem-solver; common with delayed updates.isoa

Branch 3: Thinks They Have Coverage (Lapsed/Pending)

Rebuttal: "Smart to double-check – a lot of people think their policy is active but find out it's lapsed or pending when they need it. Let me verify yours is 100% current. Takes 2 minutes – what's the policy number, or when did you set it up?"

(If lapsed/missing:) "Ok, looks like there's a gap here. When's the best time to get that reinstated properly?"

NLP: Future-paces verification pain; insurers search death records for missing policies.acli

Universal Closes

"It's fine / Don't need more"

Rebuttal: "Fair enough – but let me just confirm what you have covers your family exactly how you intend. Most people discover gaps they didn't know about. When's good for 10 minutes?"

"Too expensive to add"

Rebuttal: "Understood – we can review what you have first and only add if there's an actual gap. No commitment. When can we check?"

Power Tips

- Never argue – "Great you're covered" builds rapport
- Always verify – Ask for policy #/details to build credibility
- Stacking frame – "Enhances, doesn't replace"
- Quick verification – "2-10 minutes" shrinks resistance
- System excuses – Delays/duplicates happen; use to your advantage

Quick Flow

text

Already have → "With us or other?"

→ Other → "Stacks on top" → Schedule

→ Us → "Let me verify" → Update/Schedule

→ Lapsed → "Gap found" → Reinstate

Verification builds trust – even if they have coverage, you'll uncover upsell opportunities or lapses. Close rate skyrockets.

Quick Power Tips

- Mirror their pace – slow down with cautious prospects, match energy with upbeat ones
- Use their name often – keeps it personal, not scripted
- Open-ended scheduling beats yes/no – "When works best?" puts them in planning mode, not decision mode
- Silence after the close – ask the question, then stop talking. First one to speak loses
- 10 minutes is your anchor – say it consistently so the commitment always feels small

Globe Lapse Rebuttals

This script calls customers/ clients who have had our insurance, but their policy lapsed.

Core Lapse Objections

"It Was Too Expensive"

Rebuttal: "I completely understand – and honestly, we get in trouble if we set someone up with something they can't maintain. That's on us, not you. The great thing is all of our plans are fully customizable, so we can find something that actually fits your budget this time around. What does your schedule look like so we can get that sorted out for you?"

NLP: Shift blame to company = removes shame, rebuilds trust. Open-ended close keeps them scheduling.

"I Don't Know Why It Lapsed"

Rebuttal: "Oh wow – so you didn't even know it was gone? That's actually more common than you'd think, and that's exactly why I'm calling. Your family was covered and now they're not, and we just need to get that fixed. It only takes about 10 minutes. When's the best time we can jump on a quick call and take care of that?"

NLP: Urgency without panic – "we just need to get that fixed" creates forward momentum.

"I Don't Need It Anymore"

Rebuttal: "As in you don't want to protect your family? Help me understand what you mean by that – what changed?"

(Let them talk. Then pivot based on their answer.)

NLP: Socratic challenge – short, sharp, makes them justify themselves.

"I Don't Need It" Sub-Objections

"I Have Something Through Work"

Rebuttal: "Ok – and you obviously plan to retire someday, right? Or what if you switch jobs, get laid off, or the company changes the benefits package? What's the plan for your coverage after that happens? A private plan stays with you no matter what. When's the best time to sit down for 10 minutes so we can make sure you're not left with a gap?"

NLP: Future pacing the risk – forces them to think past the comfort of their current situation.

"I Got a Private Plan Somewhere Else"

Rebuttal: "Ok, a private plan – I respect that. Help me understand, what kind of coverage did you end up going with?"

(Let them answer. Then pivot:)

If term: "Ok, and what's your plan for when that terms out and you're no longer covered? A lot of people don't think about that gap until it's too late. When's the best time we can take 10 minutes and just make sure you're protected long-term?"

If whole/permanent: "Ok, good – so you do see the value in having something permanent. I just want to make sure what you have is actually enough to take care of your family the way you intend. When's the best time we can take 10 minutes and just do a quick review side by side?"

If they don't know the type: "That's actually really common – most people don't know the details of what they have. That's exactly why it's worth a 10-minute call, just so you know exactly what you're working with. When's the best time we can do that?"

NLP: Open discovery question puts them in the driver's seat – they reveal the gap themselves instead of you assuming it. Each branch closes the same way.

Scheduling & Momentum Objections

"I'm Busy / Bad Time Right Now"

Rebuttal: "Totally get it – I'm not asking for a lot of your day. Literally 10 minutes, whenever your life slows down. I can do early morning, late evening, weekends – whatever works around your schedule. What does your week look like so we can find that window?"

NLP: Shrink the commitment, expand the availability – removes every excuse.

"Just Send Me Something in the Mail / Email"

Rebuttal: "I wish I could make it that simple – but this involves your actual policy documents and they need to be walked through properly. If I just emailed it over, it'd be a pile of confusing paperwork and I'd be doing you a disservice. The virtual call takes 10 minutes and I handle everything for you. When's the best time we can knock that out?"

NLP: Reframe email as a worse option for them, not you.

"I Need to Talk to My Spouse First"

Rebuttal: "Absolutely – and that's exactly why I want both of you on the call. That way you're both looking at the same information at the same time instead of playing telephone with each other. It's actually a lot easier that way. When is a good time that you'll both be home together?"

NLP: Turn the objection into the reason to schedule – "playing telephone" makes solo conversations sound inefficient.

"I'll Call You Back"

Rebuttal: "I hear you – and I know how easy it is for that to get lost in the shuffle of the day. Tell you what, I'd rather just lock in a time right now so neither of us has to chase each other down. What does your evening look like – is earlier or later better for you?"

NLP: Acknowledge + assume forgetfulness (not reluctance) – lets them save face while still booking.

"I'm Not Interested in Getting It Back"

Rebuttal: "I respect that – can I just ask what changed? Because when this policy was first set up, someone made a decision to protect your family. I just want to make sure that decision still makes sense for your situation today, or if there's something better we can do for you. When's the best time to take 10 minutes and just review where you stand?"

NLP: Anchor to their past decision – reminds them they already valued this once. Curiosity close.

Lapse-Specific Power Tips

- Lead with "quality control" – it positions you as a helper, not a salesperson, and dramatically lowers the guard right out of the gate
- Let them vent about why it lapsed – the more they talk, the more intel you have to reframe with
- The shame of a lapse is your ally – people feel guilty their family was unprotected; acknowledge it with empathy, not pressure
- Always name the child or beneficiary – if the policy was on a minor, use that person's name: "So little Marcus has been without coverage since..." – that hits differently
- 10 minutes stays your anchor – every close should shrink the ask back to 10 minutes
- Open-ended scheduling every time – never give them a yes/no door, always ask "when" so they stay in planning mode

D-CARD Rebuttals

What do I have to renew?

Rebuttal: "Back when we originally sat down with you, we put together a benefit package based on the information you gave us at the time. A few things need to be reviewed, updated, and renewed so we can make sure everything is still accurate for this year. I can walk you through exactly what that looks like – it only takes about 10 minutes. When would be a good time to do that?"

Why this works:

- It avoids overexplaining.
- It doesn't depend on them remembering the first call.
- It moves straight into scheduling.

I don't have time

Rebuttal: "No problem – I'm pretty flexible and I work later in the day, so we can do this after you're done with everything. It only takes about 10 minutes. What does your evening look like?"

Why this works:

- It accepts the objection.
- It shrinks the commitment.
- It asks an open-ended scheduling question.

I'm not interested

Rebuttal: "I understand. The thing is, these benefits are already in place and just need to be reviewed so we can make sure nothing is missing or outdated. I'm not asking you to decide anything right now – I just want to walk you through what you already have and what needs to be renewed. When's the best time to take a quick look?"

Why this works:

- It reframes the call as a review, not a sale.
- It removes pressure.
- It gets back to a time-based close.

Better version of your opening response

Your current response to "What do I have to renew?" can be tightened up like this:

"Back when we originally sat down with you, we went over a benefit package that was set up based on your information at the time. Some of those benefits now need to be reviewed and renewed for this year, and I'll go over everything with you so you're clear on exactly what's changing. It only takes about 10 minutes – when would be a good time for us to do that?"

Better version of the intro logic

Instead of saying "you probably remember the first whole half of our conversation," you'll sound stronger with:

"Back when we originally sat down with you, we went over a benefit package that was set up based on the information you gave us at the time. I'm reaching out because those benefits need to be reviewed and renewed for this year, and I just need a few minutes to walk you through what that looks like."

That sounds more confident and less dependent on their memory.

Stronger tone rules

- Don't ask "You remember that, right?" because it invites pushback.
- Don't over-explain the renewal.
- Don't make it sound like they must agree before the call.
- Keep returning to: review, update, renew, quick call, 10 minutes.

Polished objection set

Here's the clean version you can plug in:

- What do I have to renew?
"Back when we originally sat down with you, we put together a benefit package based on your information at the time. A few things now need to be reviewed and renewed for this year, and I'll walk you through everything. It only takes about 10 minutes – when would be a good time to do that?"

- I don't have time.

"No problem, I work later in the day too, so we can do it after you're done with everything. It's only about 10 minutes – what does your evening look like?"

- I'm not interested.

"I understand. This isn't about starting over – it's just a quick review of benefits you already have so we can make sure everything is still current. When would be a good time for a quick look?"

Pos Rebuttals

POS Script Rebuttals

For existing policyholders, leverage the relationship – they're not cold leads, they already have coverage. Keep responses short, confident, and always pivot to the appointment.

"What do I have to renew?"

Rebuttal: "When we originally set up your policy, we included a benefit package based on your information at the time. Those benefits now need to be reviewed and renewed for this year to make sure everything is still current. I can walk you through exactly what that looks like – it only takes about 10 minutes. When would be a good time to do that?"

NLP: Matter-of-fact explanation + immediate scheduling close.

"I don't have time"

Rebuttal: "I get it – I'm flexible though and work later in the day. This only takes about 10 minutes. What does your evening look like after you're done with everything?"

NLP: Shrink commitment + open-ended time question.

"I don't need/want those"

Rebuttal: "These benefits are already part of your policy and just need to be reviewed so we can make sure they're still working for you the way you intended. I'm not asking you to add anything new – just want to make sure what you have is up to date. When's the best time to take a quick look?"

NLP: Reframe as maintenance, not addition. Removes pressure.

"I just did this recently"

Follow-up: "When was that?"

If < 4 months ago: "Ok, sometimes there are duplicates in the system. Let me get you removed from that list. While I have you though, this will be a quick call when you have a few minutes to make sure your policy information is still current. When does your schedule open up for about 2 minutes?"

If > 4 months ago: "Perfect timing then – we do this annually to make sure everything stays current. When's the best time to take care of that for you?"

NLP: Handles both scenarios, always pivots to value.

POS-Specific Power Tips

- "Your life insurance company" is your strongest opener – they already trust the relationship
- Never debate memory – don't say "you remember that, right?" Just state facts and move forward
- Annual check-up frame – "We do this every year to make sure everything stays current" sounds routine, not salesy
- Benefit package = assumed value – treat it like something they already want maintained
- 10 minutes anchor – repeat it consistently so it never feels like a big ask

Complete Objection Flow

What do I have to renew? → "Benefits need annual review" → "When can we do that?"

No time → "Only 10 minutes" → "What does your evening look like?"

Don't need/want → "Already part of your policy" → "When's good to review?"

Did this recently → "When?" → Either clear duplicate OR "Perfect timing for annual check" → Schedule

This keeps you in control while sounding like a service call, not a sales pitch.

Lapsed POS Rebuttals

Lapsed POS Rebuttals

This is your strongest script – they already had coverage, so you have massive social proof. "Quality control" + "your insurance company" = instant credibility.

Initial Lapse Discovery

"It was too expensive"

Rebuttal: "I completely understand – and honestly, we get in trouble if we set someone up with something they can't maintain. That's on us, not you. The great thing is all our plans are fully customizable, so we can get you something that actually fits your budget this time. When's the best time to take 10 minutes and get that fixed?"

"I didn't know it lapsed"

Rebuttal: "Oh wow – so you didn't even realize your family was uncovered? That's actually really common and exactly why I'm calling. We just need to get that protection back in place. It only takes about 10 minutes. When's the best time we can do that?"

"I don't need it"

Rebuttal: "As in you don't want to protect your family anymore? Help me understand what changed since you originally set this up."

(Let them talk, then pivot to "I have something else" rebuttal below.)

"I have something else" Branch

"I have work coverage"

Rebuttal: "Ok – and you plan to retire someday, right? Or what if you switch jobs or the company changes benefits? What's your plan B for coverage after that? A private plan stays with you no matter what. When's the best time to take 10 minutes and make sure you're covered long-term?"

"I have a private plan somewhere else"

Rebuttal: "Ok, help me understand – what kind of coverage did you go with?"

If term: "And what's your plan when that terms out? A lot of people don't realize the gap coming until it's too late. When's good to take 10 minutes and review that?"

If permanent: "Good – so you value permanent coverage. Let's just make sure what you have is enough for your family. When can we do a quick side-by-side?"

If unsure: "That's really common – most people don't know their policy details. That's exactly why it's worth 10 minutes to confirm you're fully protected. When works best?"

Scheduling Objections

"Can't you just send info?"

Rebuttal: "I wish it was that simple – but this involves your actual policy documents that need to be walked through. Email would just be confusing paperwork you'd probably ignore. The call takes 10 minutes and I handle everything. When's best for you?"

"I'm too busy"

Rebuttal: "Totally get it – I'm not asking for today. Just 10 minutes this week, whenever your life slows down. Early morning, late evening, weekends – what works for your schedule?"

"Talk to spouse first"

Rebuttal: "Perfect – that's why I want both of you on the call. Decisions like this go smoother when you're both on the same page with all the facts. When will you both be home together?"

Lapsed POS Power Moves

- "Quality control" opener = You're helping, not selling
- Child's name hits hardest – "Little [child's name] has been uncovered since..."
- Guilt is your ally – They chose coverage once, now they're unprotected
- Always take ownership – "That's on us" builds instant trust
- 10-minute anchor – Repeat it religiously

Quick Flow Chart

Policy lapsed? → Why? →

Too expensive → "Our fault, let's customize" → Schedule

Didn't know → "Family uncovered!" → Schedule

Don't need → "What changed?" → "Have something else?" → Work/Private branch → Schedule

Final Expense Rebuttals

Final Expense leads are incredibly strong – they're typically older prospects who specifically requested coverage for funeral costs/burial. Keep it simple, empathetic, and always pivot to the spouse/joint decision.

"I didn't request anything"

Rebuttal: "Ok! Seems like it might've been someone at your address. I have your address listed as [address] and email as [email] – does that sound right? Either way, now that I have you, final expense coverage is something most families wish they had in place. When's the best time to take 10 minutes and go over your options?"

NLP: Confirm details first (builds credibility), then pivot to value.

"I already took care of it"

Rebuttal: "Perfect – help me understand, was that a final expense product specifically, or more general life insurance?"

If final expense: "Great choice. Most people don't realize these need to be renewed or updated as life changes. When's good to take 10 minutes and make sure yours is still sufficient?"

If general life: "Ok, most general policies don't cover final expenses the way families expect. Final expense is specifically designed for burial costs with no medical exam. When can we compare yours to see if there's a gap?"

If unsure: "That's actually really common. Let's just take 10 minutes to make sure you're covered exactly how you want. When works best for you?"

NLP: Let them categorize their coverage, then expose the gap.

Universal Final Expense Objections

"Too expensive"

Rebuttal: "I hear you – final expense plans actually start as low as $1 a day. The regret I hear most is families who thought they couldn't afford $30-40/month but then had to pay $10-15k cash for a funeral. When's the best time to show you what fits your budget?"

"I'm healthy/don't need it"

Rebuttal: "That's great to hear. Final expense is guaranteed issue – no health questions at all. It's really about making sure your family doesn't have that $10-15k funeral bill hit them when they're grieving. When can we take 10 minutes to lock that in for them?"

"Spouse handles this"

Rebuttal: "Perfect – that's why I want to go over this when you're both together. Final expense decisions are best when spouses are on the same page. When will you both be home at the same time?"

Final Expense Power Tips

- Funeral cost anchor: Always mention "$10-15k cash burial cost" – that's visceral
- "$1 a day" pricing: Sounds trivial compared to funeral reality
- "Guaranteed issue": Removes every health objection instantly
- Spouse insistence: Final expense is a household decision, not individual
- Urgency: "Most people wait too long and rates go up with age"

Quick Flow

Didn't request → "Someone at your address?" → Confirm info → "Now that I have you..." → Schedule

Already handled → "Final expense or general?" → Expose gap → Schedule

Too expensive → "$1/day vs $15k funeral" → Schedule

Healthy → "Guaranteed issue burial protection" → Schedule

Final Expense converts highest because it's concrete (funeral costs), emotional (family burden), and simple ($1/day peace of mind). Stay on those 3 points.

Free WILL KIT

A will kit is a DIY package of legal forms and instructions for creating a basic last will and testament without hiring a lawyer.willed+2

What It Includes

- Core will template: Blank forms for a last will and testament, where you name beneficiaries, appoint an executor, and specify asset distribution.estate-bee+1
- Instructions and guides: Step-by-step explanations, legal term definitions, FAQs, and samples of completed wills.willedYouTube
- Supporting documents (varies by kit): Power of attorney, living will, guardianship forms for minors/pets, or estate checklists.covenanthouse+1
- Format options: Paper booklets, downloadable PDFs, online tools, or software like WillMaker.lovetoknow

How It Works

You fill out the forms by hand or online, print them, sign in front of witnesses (usually 2), and store securely – often in a binder. Basic kits cost $25-$100 and take 15-30 minutes for simple estates.benebellwen+2

Limitations

Best for straightforward situations (no complex assets like businesses or trusts); complex estates risk invalid wills or disputes without legal review.

"Why can't you just mail it / Don't need anyone to go over this"

Rebuttal: "I wish it was that simple – this is a 34-page legal document created by attorneys. A lot can go wrong if it's not filled out correctly, and I'd hate for your family to deal with that later. I'm not filling it out for you – I just walk you through it and answer questions. Takes about 10 minutes. When's the best time for that?"

"Why is this free?"

Rebuttal: "Great question – we're a 100% union label company, and this will kit is a union member benefit we've opened up as community service since COVID. No cost to you, I just explain how it works and answer questions. If you ever need our union-backed life and health plans later, great – if not, you still walk away with the kit. When works best for the walkthrough?"

"I didn't request anything"

Rebuttal: "Ok, I show [address] and requested on [date] – does that sound familiar? Often it's Facebook ads for 'Free Will & Testament.' I see you requested 2 kits, so maybe your spouse? Either way, now that I have you, someone wanted to make sure your family was protected. When's the best time to get this delivered?"

"That was so long ago"

Rebuttal: "I know, right? Demand exploded since we launched this as a community service during COVID – we've been backed up forever. Great news is we're finally ready to deliver yours. When's the best time to walk you through it?"

"I already got it done"

Rebuttal: "Perfect – so you've handled your asset distribution. Now we just need the living will portion, which is just as critical. That covers your medical wishes like DNR orders if something happens to you. When can we take 10 minutes to get that locked in?"

Universal Scheduling Objections

"Too busy / No time"

Rebuttal: "Totally get it – this is literally 10 minutes total. I work around your schedule. What does your evening look like after you're done with everything?"

"Talk to spouse first"

Rebuttal: "Smart – that's why I want both of you on together. Wills are a joint decision. When will you both be home at the same time?"

FWK Power Tips

- Confirmation code builds commitment – they write it down = invested
- "34-page legal document" = Positions you as necessary guide
- Union/community service frame = Removes suspicion about "free"

- 3-part benefit tease = Creates curiosity without pressure
- "Someone wanted your family protected" = Emotional guilt anchor

Quick Flow

text

Didn't request → Jog memory → "Someone cared enough" → Schedule

Why free? → Union benefit → "10 min walkthrough" → Schedule

Mail it? → "Legal docs need guidance" → Schedule

Already done → "Great, just need living will" → Schedule

Memory jog: Facebook ads work because people forget casual clicks but remember wanting to "get their affairs in order." Stay confident – this closes hard.

Insurance Beneficiary Referral

"I'm not interested"

Rebuttal: "I completely understand – this is actually something [insured name] already set up for you as their beneficiary. I can either cancel it, or we can take 10 minutes tomorrow so you can connect with [insured name] first and get fully informed. What works better for you – morning or evening?"

NLP: False choice close + leverages insured's authority.

"Let me talk to [insured/sponsor] first"

Rebuttal: "Absolutely – [insured name] specifically wanted me to reach out so you'd know exactly what to do if something happens to them. Let me schedule you so you have time to connect first. Tomorrow morning or evening work better for you?"

NLP: Turns objection into confirmation of insured's intent.

"What are the benefits?"

Rebuttal: "Great question – since [insured name] listed you as beneficiary, this gives you the same estate planning package they have: last will & testament, child safety kits if you have kids, accidental death coverage, and health services discount card. My job is just to show you how to handle their policy payout + deliver your benefits. Takes 10 minutes. When's best for you?"

NLP: Ties benefits to insured's decision + immediate scheduling.

Additional Beneficiary Objections

"I didn't know about this"

Rebuttal: "[Insured name] listed you specifically as beneficiary – they wanted to make sure you'd be taken care of and know exactly what to do. Smart move on their part. When's the best time to walk you through it?"

"I'm financially secure / Don't need it"

Rebuttal: "That's great – most beneficiaries I talk to who are secure like you aren't doing this for themselves, they're doing it to honor what [insured name] set up. Takes 10 minutes to understand their decision. When works for you?"

"Send me info / Mail it"

Rebuttal: "This involves [insured name]'s actual policy documents + your beneficiary benefits. Email alone would just confuse things. I walk you through both in 10 minutes. When's good?"

Beneficiary Power Tips

- [Insured name] = your ultimate closer – Every rebuttal reinforces their decision
- "What they set up for you" = obligation without pressure
- Policy payout education = Positions you as trusted advisor
- Spouse insistence = Beneficiaries typically have families too
- 10 minutes anchor – Never let it feel like a big ask

Quick Flow Chart

text

Not interested → "[Insured] already set this up" → Schedule

Talk to insured → "They wanted me to call" → Assumptive close

What benefits? → List + tie to insured → Schedule

Didn't know → "Smart they listed you" → Schedule

This closes hardest – insured already trusted you enough to name them beneficiary. Stay on "they chose you + chose me" and you're golden.

